from Burmah; they looked in good condition. There were ninety of them at the stabler, and many were travelling about through the different streets and roads. I had a short ride upon one of the largest, who kneeled down to enable me to mount him, and some of them made us a salaam with their trunks when told to do so by their keeper, or 'mahout,' as the driver is called. They are intelligent animals. A story was told me of a number of elephants in one of the Mofussil districts. One of them had committed a fault in refusing to carry a slight additional burden, when told by the mahout that he would get extra grog for it. He was tried by courtmartial in the presence of twenty of his elephantine brethren and convicted, and on the keeper's reading the sentence, all raised their trunks in acknowledgment of its justice!-Another was appointed to flog him, which he did by giving him fifty lashes with a long chain twined about his trunk, and the cul-"200 prit received the whole meekly, well knowing he deserved it! They are very cunning as to weighing their food with their trunks when on a march, and if there is an ounce short they discover it, and insist on the regular allowance, When travelling they each have a gallon of grog a day, just as sailors and soldiers have their glass. These animals were at Barrackpore recruiting after 40 "50 the voyage, and were soon to be sent up country to do service in England's cause."

GARTERS. A correspondent of the Boston Transcript says: - "We ask if it be possible that one can by gartering the stocking below the knee?-persons wish to pay the ri-k only, will be sent would not the result be a deformity? But place the band above the knee, and the barmony of the lines is not disturbed -- It becomes an ornament. The women at Athens and Rome, who were famed for their taste and skill in dress and knowledge of artist c beauty, wore the garter above the knee. But not to occupy ourselves with them, let us see how long it has been thus worn with us. We have an authority in this matter-the Duke fashionable women of the time wore it thus; for, in his memoirs, alluding to a M'lle de Brenile, whose inelegant manner caused much ridicule and gossip, he says, in his language, then so popular, 'she was one of those common, vulgar persons, who garter below the knee."
